STATIC

Literacy by itself confers status and success.

Meaning is fixed and discoverable by learning codes and conventions.

Texts are primarily printed.

The turn to the visual, multimodal, XR - are turns to “the other” forms of literacy.

DYNAMIC

Literacy is inherently ideological and contested.

Meaning is negotiated and contingent and socio-material and more than human.

Texts are all around us in the many practices in which people and machines engage to make meaning in many modes.

Literacies have their codes and conventions which work together to produce meaning.

Creativity, Participation, and Lifelong Learning

Encouraging young people to shape the conversation about AI and see it as a tool for creativity,

Media Literacies	The Uses of Media Literacy	The Uses of Media Literacy for XR	The Uses of XR for Media Literacy
Access	Using access to XR to challenge access barriers and inequities.	Socio-material, pedagogic and social access points in and to XR. PRIVACY AND EQUALITY. RIGHTS TO XR INCLUSION AND ACCESS. GOVERNANCE – ACCESS TO OUR MEDIATED SELVES FOR OTHERS?	Meaning making with and in XR at the margins of knowing.
Awareness	Critical, meta reflexion on everyday mediated practices in XR.	Reading presence and immersion. Interpreting choice. META – RIGHTS OVER OURSELVES AS MEDIA	Laminating media meaning in and with XR in the composition of self.
Capability	Dynamic Agency in XR Media Spaces.	Perspective, degrees of empathy, adapting the 'XR text'.	Media literacy as unruly encounter.
	Curative and maker literacies.	Creative media practice in and of XR. EXERCISING AUGMENTATION RIGHTS?	Unsettling (media) literacy.  Generative adaption: trans-mediating media literacy praxis.
Consequences	Counter-script media, XR capability for positive change.	From virtual empathy to positive action in space and place.  BALANCING POWER – ECOSYSTEM HEALTH	Enacting the commons through XR: media literacy as trespass.  THE LIMITS OF LITERACY? MORE THAN HUMAN ML OR MORE THAN
